Angela has been working as a facilitator, trainer, actor, and coach for the last 20 years. Having completed a Bachelor of Education from the University of Melbourne in 1991, Angela taught on and off at the secondary level until she decided she would like to work as an actor. Angela trained in Melbourne at the Acting Studio from 1993-1996 and has been involved in theatre and television for the last 25 years.

She has a passion for Leadership Development and enjoys taking organizational leaders on a learning journey to be the best they can be through self-awareness and effective communication. In particular, developing leaders to manage, motivate and coach their staff to reach their full potential.

Angela has worked extensively in Leadership Development. In 2019 she was part of a delivery team facilitating workshops in Leading Transformation for a large global organisation that needed to change mindsets and skillsets to transform successfully. The program was highly interactive, rolled out globally and created buy in and behaviour change throughout the organisation.

She has also partnered with many organizations as a professional actor/role player. Working with participants to develop their leadership capability, Angela has played many roles to stretch and develop leaders through development/assessment centres and workshops.

Angela brings a passion and enthusiasm into the training room and firmly believes people learn best when they are engaged with the topic and have a chance to learn through various mediums such as facilitated discussion, case studies, forum theatre, real play and storytelling. Combining a range of diverse learning interventions backed by best practice and scientific research means the learning sticks and the transference of the skills into the workplace is optimised.

Angela brings a unique blend of performance background and close to 20 years of experience working with various industry sectors, which gives her an appreciation and insight into many of the issues faced by business leaders in today's fast-paced world. She has worked across all levels within those organisations and has had the opportunity to work in Australia for the most part as well as across Asia, Europe and the US.
